

He wand'ring feeds
On slowly growing herbs and ranker weeds. Sandys.
Too much manuring fill'd that field with weeds,
While fests, like locusts, did destroy the seeds. Denham.
Stinking weeds and poisonous plants have their use. Mora.
When they are cut, let them lie, if weedy, to kill the weeds. Mortimer's Husbandry.
Their virtue, like their Tyber's flood Rolling, its course design'd the country's good;
But oft the torrent's too impetuous speed,
From the low earth tore some polluting weed;
And with the blood of Jove there always ran
Some viler part, some tincture of the man. Prior.
2. [Weeda, Saxon; weeda, Dutch.] A garment; cloaths; habit; drefs. Now scarce in use, except in widow's weeds, the mourning drefs of a widow. Sidney.
My mind for weeds your virtue's livery wears. Sidney.
Neither is it any man's business to cloath all his servants with one weed; nor theirs to cloath themselves so, if left to their own judgments. Hooker.
They meet upon the way
An aged fire, in long black weeds yclad;
His feet all bare, his beard all hoary gray,
And by his belt his book he hanging had. Fairy Queen.
Livery is also called the upper weed which a serving man wears, so called as it was delivered and taken from him at pleasure. Spenser.
The snake throws her enamelled skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in. Shakespeare.
Throng of knights and barons bold,
In weeds of peace high triumphs hold,
With store of ladies. Milton.
Lately your fair hand in woman's weed
Wrapp'd my glad head. Waller.
To WEED. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To rid of noxious plants.
When you sow the berries of bays, weed not the borders for the first half year; for the weed giveth them shade. Bacon.
Your feedings having flood 'till June, bestow a weeding or a light howing upon them. Mortimer.
2. To take away noxious plants.
Oh Marcius,
Each word thou'lt spoke hath weeded from my heart
A root of ancient envy. Shakespeare, Coriolanus.
3. To free from any thing hurtful or offensive.
He weeded the kingdom of such as were devoted to Elaiana, and manumiz'd it from that most dangerous confederacy.
Howel's Pseal Forest.
Sarcasms, contumelies, and invectives, fill so many pages of our controversial writings, that, were those weeded out, many volumes would be reduced to a more moderate bulk and temper. Decay of Piety.
4. To root out vice.
Wife fathers be not as well aware in weeding from their children ill things, as they were before in grafting in them learning. Sham's Schoolmaster.
One by one, as they appeared, they might all be weeded out, without any signs that ever they had been there. Locke.
WEEDER. n. f. [from weed.] One that takes away any thing noxious.
A weeder out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends. Shakespeare, Richard III.
WEEDHOOK. n. f. [weed and hook.] A hook by which weeds are cut away or extirpated.
In May get a weedhook, a crotch, and a glove,
And weed out such weeds as the corn doth not love. Tusser.
WEEDLESS. adj. [from weed.] Free from weeds; free from any thing useless or noxious.
So many weedless paradises be,
Which of themselves produce no venomous sin. Downe.
A crystal brook,
When troubled most it does the bottom show;
WEEDY. adj. [from weed.]
1. Consisting of weeds.
There on the pendant boughs, her coronet weed
Clamb'ring to hang, an envious slyver broke,
When down her weedy trophies and herself
Fell in the weeping brook. Shakespeare, Hamlet.
2. Abounding with weeds.
Hid in a weedy lake all night I lay,
Secure of safety. Dryden's En.
If it is weedy, let it lie upon the ground. Mortimer.
WEEK. n. f. [from weke, Saxon; weke, Dutch; vecka, Swedish.]
The space of seven days.
Fulfil her week, and we will give thee this also. Gen. xxix.
WEEKDAY. n. f. [week and day.] Any day not Sunday.
One solid dish his weekday meal affords.
An added pudding solemniz'd the Lord's. Pope.
WEEKLY. adj. [from week.] Happening, produced, or done once a week; hebdomadary.

The Jews had always their weekly readings of the law of Moses. Hooker.
So liv'd our fires, ere doctors learn'd to kill,
And multiply'd with heirs their weekly bill. Dryden.
Nothing more frequent in their weekly papers, than affecting to confound the terms of clergy and high-church, and then loading the latter with calumny. Swift.
WEEKLY. adv. [from week.] Once a week; by hebdomadal periods.
These are obliged to perform divine worship in their turns weekly, and are sometimes called hebdomadal canons. Ascham.
WEEK. n. f. [from weke, Saxon; weken, Dutch.] To think;
to imagine; to form a notion; to fancy. Obsolete.
1. A whirlpool.
2. A twiggan snare or trap for fish, [perhaps from weigan.]
To WEEN. v. n. [from wean, Saxon; weenen, Dutch.] To think;
to imagine; to form a notion; to fancy. Obsolete.
Ah lady dear, quoth then the gentle knight,
Well may I ween your grief is wondrous great. Spenser.
So well it her becoms, that ye would ween
Some angel had been. Spenser's Epithalamium.
When weening to return, whence they did stray,
They cannot find that path which first was shown;
But wander to and fro in ways unknown,
Further from end then, when they nearest ween. Fa. Queen.
Thy father, in pity of my hard distress,
Levy'd an army, weening to redeem
And reinstate me in the diadem. Shakespeare, Henry VI.
Ween you of better luck,
I mean, in perjur'd witness, than your master,
Whose minister you are, while here he liv'd
Upon this naughty earth. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.
They weend
That self-same day, by fight or by surprise,
To win the mount of God; and on his throne
To set the envier of his state, the proud Aspirer; but their thoughts prov'd fond and vain. Milton.
To WEEP. v. n. preterite wet, or wete. [from wean, Saxon; wean,
Dutch.] To know; to be informed; to have knowledge.
1. To show sorrow by tears.
In that sad time
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not hence exhale,
That beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping, Shak.
I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth. Shakespeare.
The days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.
Deutr. xxxiv. 8.
Have you wept for your sin, so that you were indeed sorrowful in your spirit? Are you so sorrowful that you hate it? Do you so hate it that you have left it? Taylor.
Away, with women weep, and leave me here,
Fix'd, like a man, to die without a tear,
Or save, or slay us both. Dryden.
A corps it was, but whose it was, unknown;
Yet mov'd, how'er, she made the case her own;
Took the bad omen of a shipwreck'd man,
As for a stranger weep. Dryden.
When Darius wept over his army, that within a single age not a man of all that confluence would be left alive, Artaba-nus improv'd his meditation by adding, that yet all of them should meet with so many evils, that every one should wish himself dead long before. Wake's Preparation for Death.
This lovely weeping fair cannot be dearer to thee,
Than thou art to thy faithful Scordid. Rome.
2. To shed tears from any passion.
Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among. Shakespeare, King Lear.
3. To lament; to complain.
They weep unto me, saying, give us flesh that we may eat. Nam.
To WEEP. v. a.
1. To lament with tears; to bewail; to bemoan.
If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes. Shakespeare.
Nor was I near to close his dying eyes,
To wash his wounds, to weep his obsequies. Dryden.
We wand'ring go
Through dreary walds, and weep each other's woe. Pope.
2. To shed moisture.
Thus was this place
A happy rural seat of various view,
Groves whose rich trees wept od'rous gums and balm. Mil.
Let India boast her plants, nor envy we
The weeping amber or the balmy tree,
While by our oaks the precious loads are borne,
And realms command'd which those trees adorn. Pope.
3. To abound with wet.
Key-grass grows on clayey and weeping grounds. Mortimer.
WEEPER. n. f. [from weep.]
1. One who sheds tears; a lamenter; a bewailer; a mourner.
If you have serv'd God in a holy life, send away the women

men and the weepers: tell them it is as much intemperance to weep too much as to laugh too much: if thou art alone, or with sitting company, die as thou should'st; but do not die impatiently, and like a fox caught in a trap. Taylor.
Laughter is easy; but the wonder lies,
What store of brine supply'd the weeper's eyes. Dryden.
2. A white border on the sleeve of a mourning coat.
WE'ERISH. adj. [See WEARISH.] This old word is used by Ascham in a sense which the lexicographers seem not to have known. Applied to tastes, it means insipid; applied to the body, weak and wat'ry: here it seems to mean sour; furly.
A voice not soft, weak, piping, womanish; but audible, strong, and manlike: a countenance not we'erish and crabbed, but fair and comely. Ascham's Schoolmaster.
To WEET. v. n. preterite wet, or wete. [from wean, Saxon; weten, Dutch.] To know; to be informed; to have knowledge.
Obsolete.
Him the prince with gentle court did board;
Sir knight, mought I of you this court'sy read,
To weet why on your shield, so goodly fear'd,
Bears ye the picture of that lady's head? Spenser.
I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless. Shakespeare, Ant. and Cleopatra.
But well I weet thy cruel wrong
Adorns a nobler poet's song. Prior.
WE'ETLESS. adj. [from wet.] Unknowing. Spenser.
WE'EVIL. n. f. [from wet, Saxon; weel, Dutch.] A grub.
A worm called a weevil, bred under ground, feedeth upon roots; as parsnips and carrots. Bacon's Natural History.
Corn is so innocent from breeding of mice, that it doth not produce the very weevils that live in it and consume it. Bentley.
WE'ZEL. n. f. [See WEASEL.]
I suck melancholy out of a song, as a weazel sucks eggs. Shak.
The corn-devouring weazel here abides,
And the wife ant. Dryden's Georg.
WEFT. The old preterite and part. pass. from To weave. Spens.
WEFT. n. f. [from weave, French; weft, to wander, Islandick;
weft, Latin.]
1. That of which the claim is generally waved; any thing wandering without an owner, and seized by the lord of the manour.
His horse, it is the herald's weft;
No, 'tis a mare. Ben. Johnson's Underwoods.
2. It is in Bacon for weft, a gentle blast.
The smell of violets exceedeth in sweetness that of spices, and the strongest fort of smells are best in a weft air off. Bac.
WEFT. n. f. [from weave, Saxon.] The woof of cloth.
WEFTAGE. n. f. [from weft.] Texture.
The whole muscles, as they lie upon the bones, might be truly tanned; whereby the weftage of the fibres might more easily be observed. Grew's Museum.
To WEIGH. v. a. [from weagan, Saxon; wygen, Dutch.]
1. To examine by the balance.
Earth taken from land adjoining to the Nile, and preserved, so as not to be wet nor wasted, and weighed daily, will not alter weight until the seventeenth of June, when the river beginneth to rise; and then it will grow more and more ponderous,
'till the river cometh to its height. Bacon's Natural History.
Th' Eternal hings forth his golden scales,
Wherein all things created first he weigh'd. Milton.
2. To be equivalent to in weight.
By the exsuction of the air out of a glass-vessel, it made that vessel take up, or suck up, to speak in the common language, a body weighing divers ounces. Boyle.
3. To pay, allot, or take by weight.
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here;
They are, as all my comforts are, far hence. Shakespeare.
They weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver. Zech. xi.
4. To raise; to take up the anchor.
Barbarossa, using this exceeding cheerfulness of his soldiers, weighed up the fourteen galleys he had sunk.
Here he left me, ling'ring here delay'd. Dryden.
5. To examine; to balance in the mind.
Regard not who it is which speaketh, but weigh only what is spoken. Hooker.
I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And find our griefs heavier than our offences. Shak. H. IV.
The ripeness or unripeness of the occasion must ever be well weighed. Bacon.
His majesty's speedy march left that design to be better weighed and digested. Clarendon.
You chose a retreat, and not 'till you had maturely weighed the advantages of rising higher, with the hazards of the fall. Dryden.
All grant him prudent; prudence interest weighs,
And interest bids him seek your love and praise. Dryden.
The mind, having the power to suspend the satisfaction of any of its desires, is at liberty to examine them on all sides, and weigh them with others. Locke.

He is the only proper judge of our perfections, who weighs the goodness of our actions by the sincerity of our intentions.
Addison's Spectator.
6. To WEIGH down. To overbalance.
Fear weighs down faith with shame. Daniel's Civ. War.
7. To WEIGH down. To overburden; to oppress with weight; to depress.
The Indian fig boweth so low, as it taketh root again; the plenty of the sap, and the softness of the stalk, making the bough, being overladen, weigh down. Bacon.
In thy blood will reign
A melancholy damp of cold and dry,
To weigh thy spirits down. Milton.
Her father's crimes
Sit heavy on her, and weigh down her prayers;
A crown usurp'd, a lawful king depos'd,
His children murder'd. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
My soul is quite weigh'd down with care, and asks
The soft refreshment of a moment's sleep. Addison's Cato.
Excellent persons, weighed down by this habitual sorrow of heart, rather deserve our compassion than reproach. Addison.
To WEIGH. v. n.
1. To have weight.
Exactly weighing and frangling a chicken in the scales, upon an immediate ponderation, we could discover no difference in weight; but suffering it to lie eight or ten hours, until it grew perfectly cold, it weighed most sensibly lighter. Brown.
2. To be considered as important; to have weight in the intellectual balance.
This objection ought to weigh with those, whose reading is designed for much talk and little knowledge. Locke.
A wife man is then best satisfied, when he finds that the same argument which weighs with him has weighed with thousands before him, and is such as hath born down all opposition. Addis.
3. To raise the anchor.
When gath'ring clouds o'ershadow all the skies,
And shoot quick lightnings, weigh, my boys, he cries. Dry.
4. To bear heavily; to press hard.
Can't thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleave the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart? Shakespeare, Macbeth.
WEIGHED. adj. [from weigh.] Experienced.
In an embassy of weight, choice was made of some sad person of known experience, and not of a young man, not weighed in state matters. Bacon.
WEIGHER. n. f. [from weigh.] He who weighs.
WEIGHT. n. f. [from weigh, Saxon.]
1. Quantity measured by the balance.
Tobacco cut and weighed, and then dried by the fire, loseth weight; and, after being laid in the open air, recovereth weight again. Bacon's Natural History.
Fain would I chuse a middle course to steer;
Nature's too kind, and justice too severe:
Speak for us both, and to the balance bring,
On either side, the father and the king:
Heav'n knows my heart is bent to favour thee;
Make it but scanty weight, and leave the rest to me. Dryd.
Boerhaave fed a sparrow with bread four days, in which time it eat more than its own weight; and yet there was no acid found in its body. Arbutnot on Aliments.
2. A mass by which, as the standard, other bodies are examined.
Just balances, just weights shall ye have. Lev. xix. 36.
Undoubtedly there were such weights which the physicians used, who, though they might reckon according to the weight of the money, they did not weigh their drugs with pieces of money. Arbutnot on Coins.
When the balance is intirely broke, by mighty weights fallen into either scale, the power will never continue long in equal division, but run intirely into one. Swift.
3. Ponderous mass.
A man leapeth better with weights in his hands than without; for that the weight, if proportionable, strengtheneth the finews by contracting them; otherwise, where no contraction is needful, weight hindereth: as we see in horseraces, men are curious to foresee that there be not the least weight upon the one horse more than upon the other. In leaping with weights, the arms are first cast backwards, and then forwards, with so much the greater force. Bacon's Natural History.
Wolley, who from his own great store might have
A palace or a college for his grave,
Lies here interr'd:
Nothing but earth to earth, no pond'rous weight
Upon him, but a pebble or a quoit:
If thou thou'lt neglected, what must we Hope after death, who are but shreds of thee? Bp. Corbet.
All their confidence
Under the weight of mountains bury'd deep. Milton.
Pride, like a gulf, swallows us up; our very virtues, when so leavened, becoming weights and plummetts to sink us to the deeper ruin. Government of the Tongue.
